

UNITED REPUBLIC OF TANZANIA

How child-friendly is the Government of Tanzania?

The African Report on Child Wellbeing provides an insight into the wellbeing of children in Africa and assesses the extent to which governments meet their obligations, through a ground-breaking Child-friendliness Index – developed by The African Child Policy Forum (ACPF).

The Government of Tanzania was found to be one of the fairly child-friendly governments in Africa

The Government of Tanzania ranked 23rd in the Child-friendliness Index out of the 52 African governments covered in the assessment. This was for three reasons: first, as a result of the Government of Tanzania’s fair commitment in putting in place appropriate legal provisions to protect children against abuse and exploitation; secondly because of its mid-level allocation of national budgets to provide for the basic needs of children; and thirdly because of its better than average effort in achieving outcomes as reflected on children themselves.

How well does the Government of Tanzania perform in protecting its children?

A number of indicators have been used to assess governments’ performance in protecting children against abuse and exploitation (see report for the detail).

The Government of Tanzania has performed fairly well in putting in place appropriate legal provisions to protect children against abuse and exploitation. The ranking puts Tanzania 14th in respect of legal protection of children. Tanzania has ratified most of the relevant child rights treaties (see Table 1).

Tanzania ranked 14th for its effort to put in place an appropriate legal and policy framework for children.

The Government of Tanzania has performed well in areas relating to juvenile justice system, national laws and national plans of action for survival, protection and development of children and a government body for coordinating the national strategy for children. There is also a policy of free primary education. However, corporal punishment is not prohibited at home, school or the penal system (see Table 2).

How does the Government of Tanzania perform in providing for children?

Provision for basic needs of children is measured based on two elements: budgetary commitment and child-related outcomes achieved. All the indicators used for budgetary commitment and child-related outcomes were combined to yield governments' performance score for provision of basic services for children (see Figure 1).

Tanzania ranked 25th in the combined index for provision of basic services for children

The other set of indicators refer to the outcomes achieved for children. They measure governments' performances in terms of objective results achieved in services accessed and results reflected on children themselves. Table 3, below, summarises the indicators and the data used for this particular sub-dimension for Tanzania.
